On his European tour of 1777-8, the young Mozart sought to escape the restrictions and imitations of his position in Salzburg and seek his fortune. Along the way various amateur players and rich patrons commissioned works, among them the two Flute Concertos and the Concerto for Flute and Harp. Although written for amateur players, these works are no less challenging for the soloists or enjoyable for the listener. They include many examples of the characteristically rich melodies and daring harmonies that were later to immortalise Mozart's greatest music.

"Gallois has always been an inventive player.. his performances are full of subtle nuances and deft touches of timing... all three performances on this new disc are up there with the best." (BBC Music Magazine)
