MOZART: Sonata in D for two pianos, K448 *	17:11	The Russian pianist Josef Lhevinne was born near Moscow in 1874. A prodigy, at fifteen he played Beethoven's Emperor Concerto in a concert conducted by the Russian pianist and composer Anton Rubinstein. The most popular item in this recital is the Blue Danube Waltz , arranged by the nineteenth-century pianist Schulz-Evler. Also included is a superb account of the G minor Prelude composed by his classmate Rachmaninov, and Tchaikovsky's Trepak . Shortly before his death, Tchaikovsky asked Lhevinne to learn three of his late piano pieces. He may be considered to be a truly authoritative interpreter of Tchaikovsky's music.
