

Dietrich Buxtehude (c. 1637-1707), Danish-born organist and composer of vocal and organ music, sacred cantatas, and chorales. Buxtehude was the famed organist and composer whom J.S. Bach made a 200-mile journey on foot to hear. His keyboard music greatly influenced Bach with their clarity of line, nobility, and often daring harmonic invention. He was the greatest composer of northern European Baroque in the period between Heinrich Schütz and J.S. Bach.
