Vivaldi was not the only composer to write a universally popular Four Seasons. Composed directly after The Creation (Naxos 8.557380-81), Haydn's oratorio The Seasons features three peasant soloists who sing of the joys, trials and tribulations of country life throughout the year, complete with a chorus of villagers. Haydn's genius transforms many genre scenes – a summer storm, hunting episodes, daybreak, the gloomy winter fog and peasant dances – into something truly spectacular, joyous and life-affirming, in keeping with his deeply held religious conviction.
