

When Rossini drew a line under his own hugely successful operatic career at the age of 37, he spent his final years in Paris where he wrote numerous short piano pieces arranged in 14 volumes, which he jokingly called Peches de vieillesse (Sins of Old Age): experimental trifles which blur the boundaries between the irreverent and the serious. Volume VII, 'Album de chaumière' (The Cottage Album) includes gems such as the delightful Petite polka chinoise, the intimate and touching Petite valse de boudoir and the decidedly reassuring Prelude inoffensif. The recording is rounded off with four solo piano pieces from Volume IX of the Peches, whose titles, like those of the other works on this disc, are playfully deceptive. The Melodie candide may be ostentatiously demure, but deep-down it is shameless.
