BEETHOVEN SCHUBERT

and their Contemporaries

Beethoven, Schubert and their Contemporaries

We tend to think of the giants of classical music in isolation, but closer examination shows how a continuum of influences and social ties connects our favourites to composers we might have yet to discover. The piano sonatas of Muzio Clementi for instance, had a great influence on the young Beethoven, and Johann Nepomuk Hummel was his close friend for many years. Beethoven recognised the “divine spark” in Franz Schubert, who lived in Vienna when Beethoven’s popularity was at its height. Schubert was also a torch-bearer at the great man’s funeral. Schubert’s remarkable legacy of songs, symphonies, sonatas and chamber music is crowned by late masterpieces such as the song cycle Winterreise (8.554471) and the unforgettable String Quintet D. 956 (8.550388).

Ludwig van Beethoven changed the course of music history with his oeuvre of orchestral, chamber and solo works which, including the Fifth Symphony (8.553224) and the “Moonlight” Sonata (8.550045) remain some of the most famous musical utterances of all time. Beethoven’s unassailable status as an independent creative voice is symbolic of the romantic spirit which infused subsequent generations. Touring musicians such as Ferdinand Ries helped spread Beethoven’s music as well as their own, and violinist Louis Spohr’s romantic works take us from his meetings with Beethoven to the time of Wagner.

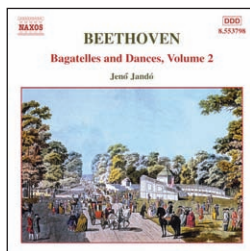

Our catalogue continues in this powerful German tradition with greats such as Carl Maria von Weber, but exploring other countries brings rewards such as the elegant Spanish guitar music of Fernando Sor, an entire Italian line of classical masters such as Cherubini, Carulli and Giuliani, and notable innovators such as the Irishman John Field. Unearthing forgotten composers such as Johann Simon Mayr has revealed a further wealth of musical riches, proof if any were needed that novelty and freshness can be a part of any era in music.
