

FILM MUSIC CLASSICS

At the turn of the 20th century, a new art form emerged, one that go on to dominate the next 100 years. Although cinema began in silence, the moving pictures on the silver screen were soon accompanied by sound, attracting musicians and composers who were quick to grasp the new possibilities of this medium, which demanded an entirely new approach, both aesthetically and technologically. Film composition developed into a sophisticated branch of music-drama. Although many feature films have tailor-made music scores by distinguished composers, many blockbusters have also called upon pieces from the classical repertoire to enhance the movie's ambiance.

This segment list contains the Naxos Film Music Classics, which is a series devoted to re-recordings of the finest original orchestral film scores, often painstakingly reconstructed by film music experts such as John Morgan. Other recordings include the classical composers who occasionally worked in cinema, such as Dmitry Shostakovich, Benjamin Frankel, Jacques Ibert and Arthur Honegger.
