Northern Stars

Often inspired by folk tradition, nature, landscape and a potent spirit of independence, the music of Scandinavia, Finland and the Baltic states is distinctive and varied, with each country's music influenced by its neighbours, yet shaped and coloured by its individual heritage.

Traveling composers such as Sweden's Joseph Kraus introduced 18th and early 19th century classical trends from Germany and Italy, but with national identity gaining increasing importance as Romantic ideals took hold, influential and distinctive creative lines were soon established. The muscular strength of Carl Nielsen's symphonies grew out of the Danish nationalist vigor shown by Friedrich Kuhlau and Niels Gade, extending to names such as Per Nørgård today. Gade was a teacher of Edvard Grieg, who owes his position as Norway's leading composer, at least in part, to the country's traditional folk music and the poignant lyricism of the Hardanger fiddle.

The music of Finland is dominated by the rugged symphonies of Jean Sibelius, and his Finlandia ensured his status as an enduring national symbol. Sibelius successfully combined the lessons of Viennese romanticism with a strong Nordic character, and this pragmatic approach has generated numerous contemporary giants such as Aus Sallinen, Einojuhani Rautavaara, Kalevi Aho and Kaija Saariaho.

Turbulent history in the Baltic States partially explains a conspicuous individualism amongst the region's composers, few more so than with Arvo Pärt, whose work distills the strong Estonian vocal tradition into music of striking intensity and crystalline beauty.

A powerful sense of identity and eloquent expressiveness will always be a strong feature of the Nordic and Baltic areas, and exploring the music of these northern lands is fascinating and rewarding.

Here, for the first time, is the combination of Naxos vast Nordic and Baltic repertoire together with the major independent labels of the Nordic region, which combined catalogue gives an encyclopaedic introduction to its music. From the fresh air and open landscapes of Franz Berwald to the quirky intellect of someone like Rued Langgaard, everywhere you look you will find rich treasures to satisfy and surprise.
